Claus Richter | Monika Stricker

For Art Cologne 2023 Clages (Cologne) proposes a collaboration booth with Galerie Valeria Cetraro (Paris). Clages presents the positions of two artists, who deal with the psychology of man. Together, Claus Richter and Monika Stricker form a sophisticated examination of the human psyche, without visualizing it.

Claus Richter's love of craft is evident in his art: he often refers to his own childhood, creating a deliberately nostalgic, transfigured and playful world full of fantasy and freedom. Toys, puppet theaters, fairy-tale scenery, and the back drops of large theme parks are Richter's bulwark against rationalism and disenchantment. His figures perform, dance and rejoice and are not stopped by their framing.

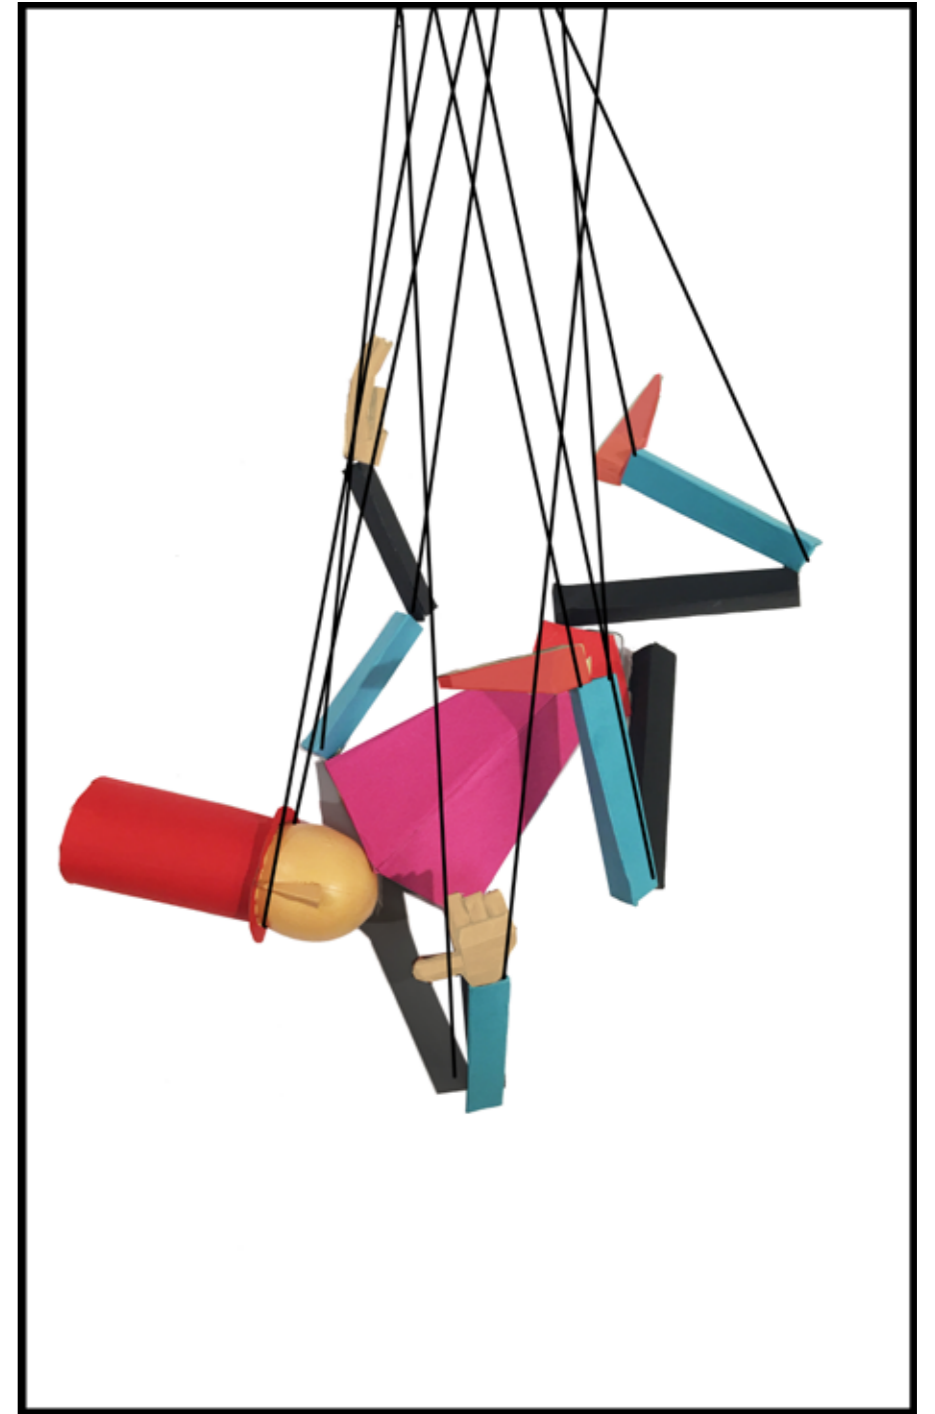

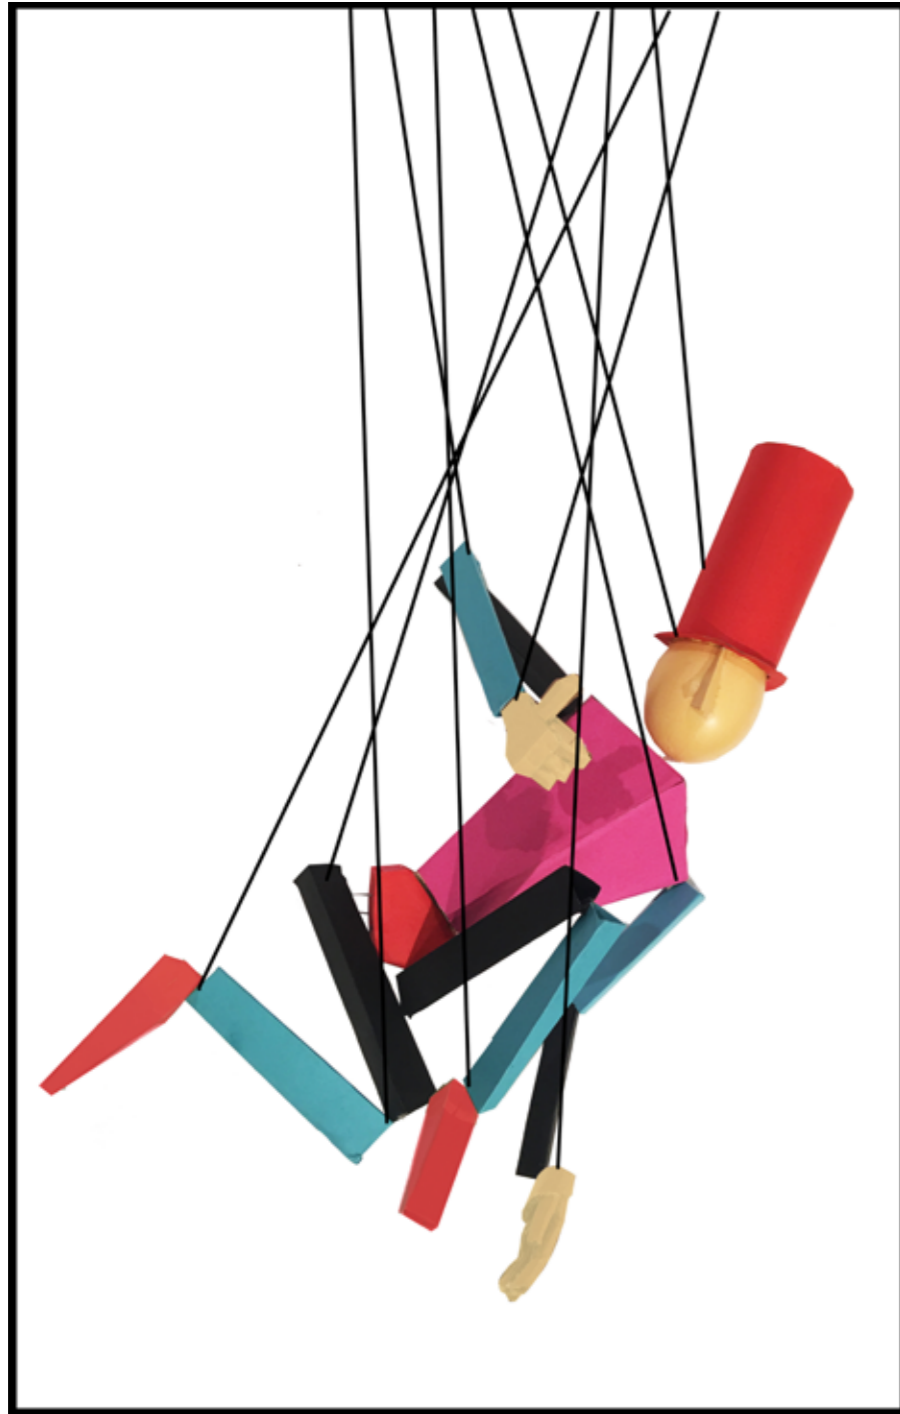

Monika Stricker is concerned with the relationship between body and self. These do not necessarily have to be matching - the psychological and the physical can exist separately, even contradict each other. For Monika Stricker, bodies are the spaces of the self, the elucidation of the ego. The representation of a monkey always means something else, even more so in painting. Mostly monkeys tell as a distorted image of man, articulate the tragic dimension of human existence, of life as a cultivated animal. The artist processes the tension between human culture and animal nature.
