Bradley Davies

Group Show

November 6th – December 21st 2024

Clages is delighted to present its second solo exhibition with Bradley Davies (*1990 London). Under the title Group Show the Berlin-based artist is showing a new body of works.

At the first glance, the title Group Show may seem misleading in the context of a solo exhibition, but it addresses the preconceived definitions often associated with art and artistic processes. It becomes the starting point for the reflection on a collective dimension of creativity, questioning the aspects of individualism in art. In this context, the act of artistic creation becomes an inevitably dialogical process, which emerges far from the myth of creative isolation.

"Because all works of art are really a collaboration, no art is made in a vacuum. Thinking about trying to then define a group, like many various unique voices that make a choir that sing a song in unison, in parts together, by a composer, it is collective but also not. Parameters are simply inevitable." – Bradley Davies

Group Show functions as an almost collage-like compilation of Davies' various work impulses, exploring an awareness of a constant exchange of inspiration between the inside and the outside. This is also evident in the motifs and captured scenes of everyday life, which take both centre stage and celebration here.
